The Last Known Journeys

In 1854, Antoine Dubois set out on what was supposed to be a short reconnaissance mission into uncharted territories of North Africa. He was known for his meticulous planning and cautious approach, which made his sudden disappearance all the more perplexing. Elisabeth waited anxiously for his return, but weeks turned into months without any word. Her concern grew into despair when no communication was received from him.

The Discovery of the Map and Clues

Several months after Antoine's disappearance, Elisabeth discovered a partially completed map in his study. The map contained strange annotations and markings that seemed to indicate a hidden location or secret meeting point. These clues fueled rumors that his disappearance was not accidental but possibly orchestrated.
